RACHEL FUELBERTH

"Rachel is a strong, quiet leader. As a long time member of NAHS, her dedication to the Art Department has been invaluable every year, and her own artwork is thought-provoking and technically impressive. I can always count on her when volunteers are needed. She has a unique ability to foresee what needs to be done and step up to take action. She is a thinker and a doer, and this combination propels her to excellence in all her work."

"Rachel is ever ready to facilitate activities in the classroom. Whether it is assisting the teacher, other students, and/or preparing materials. At the same time, she is just as adept at staying focused on her own work. Her ability to be fully present day after day-- throughout the class as well as with her homework--sets her apart from most students. The success she achieves is indicative of this dedication."

"Rachel is incredibly kind and generous. She is always willing to do a favor for someone and she goes out of her way to help those around here. If she's working on problems in class and sees where people may struggle, she willingly shares that will her classmates, just to give them a helping hand. I also appreciate that Rachel is not a pushover, she will stand up for herself and others if people are being disrespectful. Rachel truly makes a difference!"

"Rachel goes above and beyond without expectations of rewards or attention. As one of the seniors on cross country, I frequently hear other students talking about her and the positive impact she has on them. She has been running tech for every Mass since her freshman year and has recruited and trained a whole team of students to do it. It is really a time commitment that makes a difference for our entire school. She collected a car's worth of school supplies for the Rosebud reservation. Many were gently used and those no longer got thrown into the trash but instead were repurposed in a place that will use them. Since we collected so much she's even started researching on her own other places to get the supplies to next year."

"Rachel is a caring and kind young woman. She sees things that need to be done and takes care of them without being asked. She organized the school supply donation drive for the Rosebud Reservation. She made sure a student new to our school had a place in a Rendezvous group last year. She reaches out to our transfer students and makes them feel like they are part of our school. Rachel is an excellent student and an excellent role model!"

"Rachel is very involved in things she is concerned about and passionate about. She works very hard to make a difference in others' lives."

"Rachel is a joy to have in the classroom. She works hard to complete her daily homework and prepare for upcoming tests. Rachel is a wonderful role model for her classmates and is always ready to lend a helping hand."
